Disclaimer:

We want to emphasize that this report is based exclusively on information publicly disclosed by X through its official Ads repository in May & June 2025 and can be independently verified by accessing the same public database. Manual errors could have occurred; to this end, for full transparency and to enable complete reproducibility, we have archived the complete raw datasets of advertisements from these advertisers on the archiving service perma.cc, certifying both the origin of these exports from X Ads repository and file integrity. This enables full independent validation and replication of our observations.

At no point does this report provide, attempt to provide, or purport to offer legal determinations regarding potential violations of platform policies, GDPR provisions, or DSA requirements. Any assessment of compliance or non-compliance with applicable regulations or policies, whether concerning the advertisers or the platform, lies beyond the scope of this analysis.

Introduction

Online advertising, at the core of the online economic model, has sparked regulatory interest due to the risks it may present. In the European Union, regulators have acted through the Digital Services Act (“DSA”)¹ to increase transparency and accountability.

Ads Repository

This European legislation requires very large online platforms to publicly disclose all advertisements they distribute in the European Union, alongside information about the advertiser and the “main targeting parameters” used in delivery.

Accordingly, X (formerly Twitter) has implemented its Ads Repository², which enables public access to advertisements run in European countries. Importantly, X delivers substantially more comprehensive targeting information than competing platforms. While services like Facebook and Instagram only disclose basic demographic parameters —age, gender, and location— X reveals in its Ads Repository some of the keywords employed in the targeting. This enhanced disclosure enables meaningful public scrutiny and establishes a standard we encourage other platforms to adopt.

For instance, we learn in X Ads Repository that the account @NetflixFR ran in October 2023, an advertisement promoting their show “Lupin”. This advertisement, shown 305k times, targeted users in France having an interest for “#LupinNetflix”, without excluding any particular segment of users.

X Portability Archive

Additionally, to enable users' right to data portability, as provided for in Article 20 of the European General Data Protection Regulation³ (“GDPR”), X offers its users to download a machine-readable archive of information associated with their account. This archive contains, among other information, the list of ads users have seen, along with their targeting options; and can be requested by visiting X’s settings at: x.com/settings/download_your_data,

To enable the general public to explore, in an intuitive way, the advertisements they have been served and the targeting criteria used, we developed a companion website alongside the first version of this report: haveibeentargeted.online. On this platform, users could upload their X archive and check whether they had been served ads based on targeting criteria that may be construed as sensitive under GDPR Article 9.

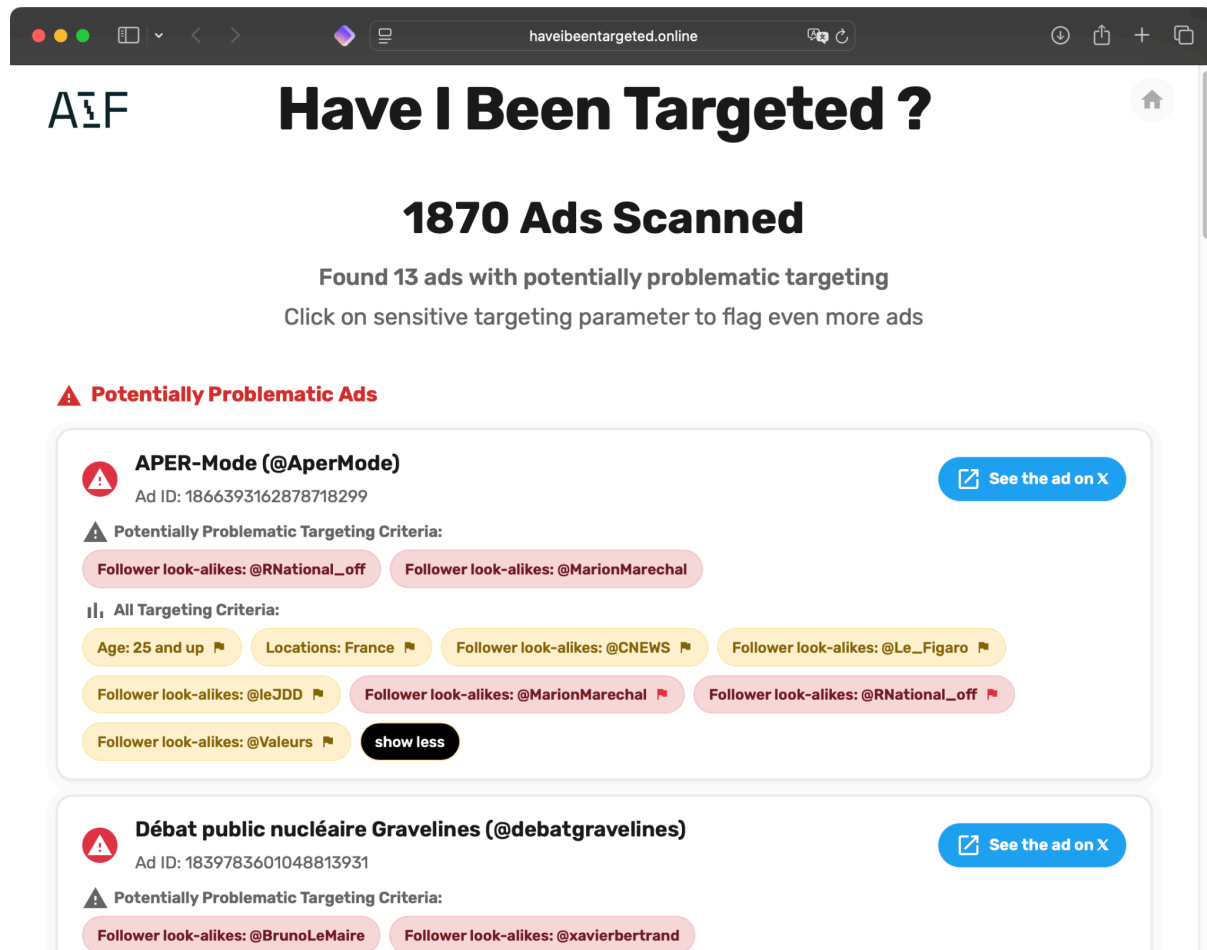

Fig 1. Screenshot of the companion website haveibeentargeted.online displaying potentially problematic ads identified from a user's X archive

³ https://eur-lex.europa.eu/legal-content/EN/TXT/?uri=CELEX:32016R0679#art_20

This additional crowd-sourced data collection revealed targeting options such as follower look-alike, interest, and conversation topics, which are not disclosed in X's Ads repository, thereby enabling us to uncover additional advertisers engaged in sensitive targeting. Because these additional criteria are not publicly disclosed, we cannot independently verify user submissions. Therefore, we report only findings from first-hand volunteer submissions that we could confirm had not been tampered with.

Targeting Options

X offers its advertisers a wealth of targeting features. With demographic targeting, advertisers can reach people based on location, language, device, age, and gender. With audience targeting, they can serve ads based on conversations, events, interests, movies and TV shows, keywords, follower look-alikes, and engagement.

Keyword targeting: allows advertisers *“to reach people on X based on keywords in their search queries, recent posts, and posts they recently engaged with”*⁴. Advertisers can type keywords to target or to exclude:

- Add: If someone has either posted or interacted with a post containing the keyword, and they meet [advertiser's] geo[location], language, device, and gender targeting, they're eligible to be targeted by this campaign.
- Exclude: If someone has either posted or interacted with a post containing the excluded keyword, they are not eligible to be targeted by this campaign, even if they meet [advertiser's] geo[location], language, device, and gender targeting. Additionally, [advertiser's] campaign will not serve in the Search results for any excluded keywords.

Conversation targeting: allows advertisers to *“quickly target audiences based on the conversations they're actively participating in on the platform”*⁵. To this end, X has curated “over 10,000 conversation topics”, within those notices “Politician: Marine Le Pen”, “Politician: Giorgia Meloni” or “Political affiliation - Rassemblement National”.

Follower look-alikes targeting: allows advertisers “to target people with interests similar to an account's followers”. For example, entering @NASA targets people likely to be interested in space exploration and astronomy.

Targeting on “sensitive categories”

X's advertising policies⁶ states that “Using keywords to target customers based on sensitive categories is not permitted”. More generally, X prohibits advertisers from targeting customers based on “sensitive categories” such as “political affiliation”:

Which sensitive categories may not be targeted?

- Alleged or actual commission of a crime
- Health
- Negative financial status or condition
- Racial or ethnic origin
- Religious or philosophical affiliation and/or beliefs
- Sexual orientation
- Gender identities other than cisgender
- Political affiliation and/or beliefs
- Trade union membership
- Genetic and/or biometric data

Fig 3. Screenshot of “X Ads Policies - as of June 15, 2025

These sensitive categories are similar to the definition of “special categories of personal data” in the General Data Protection Regulation of the European Union⁷. The processing of such special categories of personal data is only allowed under exceptional circumstances defined in Article 9(2) GDPR, and remains in general prohibited by Article 9(1) GDPR.

The European Data Protection Board emphasizes that special categories of personal data derived from other information fall within the scope of Article 9 GDPR. Specifically, the EDPB states that in their “Guidelines 8/2020 on the targeting of social media users”⁸ that:

“If a social media provider or a targeter uses observed data to categorise users as having certain religious, philosophical or political beliefs - regardless of whether the categorization is correct/true or not - this categorisation of the user must obviously be seen as processing of special category of personal data in this context.”

⁸ https://www.edpb.europa.eu/our-work-tools/our-documents/guidelines/guidelines-82020-targeting-social-media-users_en Paragraph 123

In addition to the GDPR and X's internal policies, the European Digital Services Act prohibits⁹, per its Article 26(3), online platforms from presenting advertisements based on profiling using special categories of personal data, as defined in the GDPR.

Methodology

This data report put into practice the transparency objectives of the DSA by examining targeting parameters disclosed by X. In particular, we exported, through X Ads repository, the set of advertisements ran on X between September 1st, 2023 and May 1st, 2025 for a selection of advertisers and of European countries. Despite contacting X's team, we were not granted API access to the Ads repository, which restricted the scope of this study to a pool of arbitrarily chosen advertisers, without aiming for comprehensiveness.

Additionally, we expanded our pool of advertisers to include those identified through users' crowd-sourced targeting data.

We then manually inspected the targeting option used by those advertisements. The aim was to determine whether any targeting had been carried out using information that could be considered as belonging to “sensitive categories”.

For example, to classify an advertisement in the “sensitive category”: “Political opinions”, we retained ads relying on the names of political movements or personalities as part of their targeting. Similarly, for the “Health” sensitive category, we have retained ads relying on the name of drugs or illnesses as part of their targeting.

To ensure reproducibility, we have archived the complete raw datasets of ads from these advertisers on the archiving service perma.cc, certifying both the origin of these exports from X Ads repository and file integrity. This enables independent validation and replication of our observations.

Results

We summarize our observations in the following table:

Sensitive Categories	Advertisers whose microtargeting may be construed as as related to protected “sensitive” categories
Political Opinion
Religious or Philosophical Beliefs
Sexual Orientation
Health
Racial or Ethnic Origin
Trade Union Membership

Fig 3. Summary of advertisers having run advertisements whose targeting options may be construed as related to protected "sensitive" categories. For illustration purposes only, we refer the reader to the dedicated section for each advertiser.

Importantly: This report does not provide legal determinations regarding whether the subsequently reported targeting criteria fall within the scope of "special categories of personal data" as defined in GDPR provisions, nor whether such practices breach platform policies, GDPR provisions, or DSA requirements.

EU Home Affairs

Data from X Ads repository shows that between September 2023 and May 2025, the account @EUHomeAffairs, the account of the Directorate-General for Migration and Home Affairs at the European Commission, ran in:

- in France: 2 ads shown 786.6 thousands times (perma.cc/48G5-TGR4)
- in the Netherlands: 3 ads shown 598.2 thousand times (perma.cc/YC7J-8XY5)
- in Sweden: 2 ads shown 761.1 thousands times (perma.cc/8PTJ-9JUV)
- in Slovenia: 2 ads shown 95.1 thousands times (perma.cc/W7H6-G9JG)

All these ads¹⁰, translations of one another, were distributed in September 2023 to advocate for a proposed law that could undermine all encrypted online communication by allowing authorities to read online chats. All ads defined their "Excluded Targeting Segments" field as such:

Vona Gabor, anti-Christian, Sinn Féin, Search Results, Rafał A. Ziemkiewicz, Wojciech Daniel Cejrowski, Giorgia Meloni, FEMYSO, Marine Le Pen, Qatar, Max Kolonko, Puidgemont, #Qatargate, Telewizja Trwam, Christian-phobia, HC Strache, Euroscepticism, Nexit, Orban, Christianity Russophobia, #EUCorruption, Die soziale Heimatpartei, communism, Nigel Farage, Alternative für Deutschland, Nazi, HC Stache, Jarosław Kaczyński, AfD, #Spanexit, Putin, #NEXIT, catalonia, Christian, English Defence League, brexit, Vox, Paweł Piotr Kukiz, Matteo Salvini, christianophobia, Julian Assange, Viktor Orban, #EvaKaili, Gazeta Polska Codziennie

Following a complaint by Noyb¹¹ on behalf of a user who had been served one of these ads: "The European Data Protection Supervisor (EDPS) has issued a decision [in December 2024] finding that the European Commission has illegally targeted advertising at citizens using "sensitive" personal data on their political views".
